In Act 2 Scene 2 we hear of the murder of Duncan, in Macbeth Duncan's murder happens off stage, perhaps to focus more significantly not on the act of death but the moral turmoil and consequences that are incurred, as supported through the critical interpretation that Macbeth is a 'tragic hero'. The first speaker in the scene is Lady Macbeth, "that which hath made them drunk, hath made me bold", it could suggest that she is pleased with the counterpart she played within the ...

WordPress.com. Act 2, Scene 2, Props. March 20, 2016 March 21, 2016 skim8722. I imagine there being numerous bloody handprints, as seen above, in act 2, scene 2. During this scene, Macbeth kills King Duncan and while doing so, Lady Macbeth describes Macbeth's shouting as if she "heard the owl scream and the crickets cry." (II.ii.21-22) Macbeth is obviously shaken by his horrible act of killing King Duncan and as a result, he is not conscious of what he is doing at the moment.

In this scene, Banquo is instrumental setting up the atmosphere and mood of the scene. Deep into the night, Banquo and Fleance are retiring to their room, but Banquo remarks that stars are not shining on this night. Heavy summons, perhaps he means a premonition (a feeling of dread), lie on him this night.

In act 2 scene 1 of Macbeth, Macbeth imagines a dagger leading him to Duncan. He says, "Is this dagger which I see before me, The handle toward my hand? Come let me clutch thee!" (2.1.49-50). The dagger in the image has a sharp blade that would have made it even more tempting for Macbeth to grab and use to kill Duncan.

Setting in Act 2 of Macbeth plays a major role in the play because it is the act of where Duncan is murdered by Macbeth. Everything in the future is determined by this one act which was a result of the witches' prophecy. Scene one begins with Banquo and Fleance, where they sense something is wrong. The weather is different, and they note that it is unusually dark as "the moon is down" (2.1.2).

I also chose this song to represent scene 6, Act 2 because Romeo and Juliet believe they will never be lonely again and will stay together forever. "Then love-devouring Death do what he dare, It is enough I may but call her mine." (2.6.7-8) Although, it's ironic that they think this, because they die shortly after the marriage, this song can still relate to the scene.

This motif of disease will continue in the next scenes. We looked closely at a couple of extracts from scene 2. Here are the screen shots. In the first one, the groups made some interesting observations about how 'sticking on his hands' reminds us a lot of the recurring motif of hands in the play (act 2 scene 2 in addition to act 5 scene 1).
